

8. Dog food contains many different compounds including fats, vegetable oils, fatty acids, flavour and aroma molecules, proteins, water, antioxidants and emulsifiers.

It is important that dog food has a long shelf life, retains its appearance and texture, as well as providing sufficient nutritional value.

Using your knowledge of chemistry, explain the role of different compounds in dog food.

3

[Turn over

